CUMBERLAND AVENUE TO BE RECONSTRUCTED AND SURFACED

Ordinance Passes First Reading Last Night—Spitting Ordinance Passes, Help in Clean Up Advocated

EAST END PAVING AWAITS ACTION HIGHWAY COMMISSION

An ordinance to have Cumberland avenue resurfaced and reconstructed between Seventeenth and Twenty-second streets passed the first reading at the meeting of the city council last night.

The paving will be of rock asphalt forty feet in the center and will have concrete gutters ten feet wide on either side. Mayor J. H. Keeney said that the plans and specifications were on file and that bids would be advertised from them. A special meeting of the council will be held at 7 o'clock Saturday evening for the purpose of passing the ordinance on the second reading. Mayor Keeney said that they should be ready for the bids by May 15.

In regard to the East End paving proposition, the mayor said that an engineer from the state highway commission was expected here last week to check up on the specifications which the city engineer recently made. He will be here within a few days, in all probability, according to the mayor.

"The citizens have been much wrought up over the delay of the East End paving and I have myself," said the mayor, "but we cannot do anything until we can get the cooperation of the state. As soon as the state engineer checks up on the work here we will be ready to pass a city ordinance for the work and to advertise for bids. I have been having some correspondence with a Knoxville contractor in regard to the work."

Garbage Disposal Discussed

An ordinance against spitting on the sidewalk, street in public buildings, hotels, depots and other public places which had been framed at the instigation of the Woman's Club passed the first reading.

Motion to rescind the order made at the last council meeting to pay $150 to Hess and Chesney for auditing the city books was made by Mrs Rosemary Percefell. She said that as the auditors were members of the bonding company they ought not to audit the city's books, though she did not doubt the integrity of the men. She was in favor of having the books audited by another auditing firm "to appease the tax payers of the city" she declared. Her motion did not receive a second.

The question of garbage disposal came up for a lengthy discussion by members of the council and by citizens who had come before the meeting. Various unsightly places were pointed out and persons responsible for promiscuous dumping of rubbish were scored by the speakers. Resolution was passed providing that the mayor give instructions to the chief of police to notify all owners of unsightly garbage places.

Appoint Equalization Board

The question of sewers for Exeter avenue came up for discussion but in view of the fact that so many other public jobs are already contemplated, the matter was deferred without taking any action.

An equalization board consisting of W. S. Anderson, H. F. Hambright and T. H. Campbell was appointed by the mayor.

Motion was offered and passed providing for the interior cleaning and painting of the city hall. The question of materials and of contracting for the work was left with the building committee.

Ten councilmen and the mayor were present at the meeting as well as a number of citizens. It was the most enthusiastic meeting that the body has had for several months. Every member of the council and the mayor seemed to be eager to do something for the good of the city.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH EVANGELIST COMES

Rev. J. L. Jones Conducts First Service Last Night—Subject Tonight "One Astray—Is It You?"

The Rev. Joel Lee Jones of Hollidays Cove, W. Va., arrived last night to conduct a two weeks' revival service at the Christian church, and preached his first sermon there last night. The Rev. Jones is well pleased with his reception in Middlesboro, with the town in general, and with the citizens he has met, in and out of the church. Those who have met the Rev. Jones and have heard him preach are more than pleased with him and predict an unusually successful revival series.

"Religion That Raises the Roof," was the subject of the Rev. Jones' sermon last night. It was based on the story of the palsied man let down through the roof to be healed by Christ. The evangelist emphasized the fact that religion should be continuous cooperative, full of unselfish service, moral and physical, and giving courage, drawing his points from the story.

"One Astray—Is It You?" is the subject of the sermon tonight. A call meeting of the Christian church congregation will be held Wednesday evening to consider plans to promote the meeting.

M. H. S. QUITS BASEBALL BECAUSE NO PLACE TO PLAY

The baseball game scheduled between Harlan and Middlesboro for last Saturday has been called off. The M.H.S. team was expected to leave here Saturday morning but as only seven of them appeared at the depot, Prof. R. F. Porter decided to call the game off.

Boys have lost interest in baseball this year, he says, because there is no possibility of getting other team to come here and play on account of the fact that Middlesboro has no fenced in athletic field. There will be no more games scheduled and the baseball season has ended so far as M. H. S. is concerned, he says.

ALL ENGLAND ASTIR OVER DUKE OF YORK'S WEDDING THURSDAY

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Apr. 24.—The ceremony which will attend the marriage of the Duke of York and Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon on Thursday was rehearsed in Westminster Abbey today. Members of the royal household played the part of bride and groom while a court official assumed the role of King George.

Meanwhile a mountain of gifts continue to accumulate at Buckingham Palace. Ropes of pearls, diamond necklaces, tiaras, bracelets, pendants and brooches compose more than a thousand gifts valued at more than seven figures for King George's son and his modest Scotch bride. The womanhood of Great Britain have taken her to its heart unreservedly. Her charm and simplicity make her second only to Princess Mary in the affection of the British public. Her modesty made her reluctant to assume the responsibilities of fourth lady of the land.

Probably no bride who ever went to the altar with a king's son ever chose so simple a trousseau. Her gowns are plain and even her wedding dress is made in mediaeval style.

THIEF FOILED IN ATTEMPT TO FILCH SPARE TIRE OF FORD

Who steals my purse steals trash, no doubt, but he that filches from a new car its spare tire takes that which makes the owner angry indeed. At least it did a local motorist last night who was lucky enough to recover the tire before the robber had gone far with it.

The owner of the car was not far away when the spare tire was "filched" from its fastening at the rear. The unknown was obviously an adept at this particular brand of thievery for he lost no time in getting the tire off and running away with it. The owner of the car pursued the villian who dropped his loot before he had gone a block.

GARBAGE WAGON GETS ONE CALL

Another District to Be Served Tomorrow—Clean Up Signed Put Out By Woman's Club

Though the city is maintaining wagons for the hauling of garbage, residents are not piling up their rubbish and notifying the city, according to Chief H. E. Ball. Only one person has called today and requested that garbage be removed, he stated.

"The city does not propose to gather up the rubbish to haul away," the chief continued, "those who want their garbage hauled off at the expense of the city had better act now for the wagons will not be operated next week."

The block around the Piedmont and the Cumberland hotels including part of Nineteenth street and up to Twenty-first street will be worked tomorrow he said.

Large and artistic billboard signs announcing the clean-up campaign have been donated by the Wilder Poster service. Two of these are in the business section on Cumberland avenue and the other is on Nineteenth street between Cumberland and Lothbury avenues. The signs are painted in large green letters and have the date April 22-28, at the top and the words "Middlesboro Woman's Club" at the bottom.

3 HURT IN AUTO COLLISION NEAR FERNDALE SUNDAY

Three persons were painfully, though not seriously, injured in an automobile collision which occurred on the Pineville road near Ferndale Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Brooks Southard, her three year old son and Nickey Primavera, age 4, were the injured persons.

Witnesses of the wreck say that George Marting of Pineville who was driving a seven-passenger car attempted to turn at a narrow place in the road which act caused the collision between his car and the small roadster driven by Brooks Southard. The two children and Mrs. Southard were hurled into the road. Their injuries consist of cuts and bruises about the head and shoulders.

CAT AND CANARY WELL RECEIVED

Show Last Night at Manring a Thriller From Start to Finish—Acting Was Splendid

"A thrilling thrill a minute" did not begin to describe the thrills which "The Cat and the Canary," shown at the Manring theater last night, held for its audience. From the very offset of the show till the curtain went down the last time, there was never a minute when one felt he could settle back in his chair and relax, and be sure that some thing still more startling was not just about to happen.

For hair raising episodes and general ability to hold the audience's deepest attention, the show last night had any thing else given here in a long time badly outdistanced. The plot was an unusual one and the way it worked out to the entirely surprising denouement was the basis of the play's success. The splendid acting of every member if the cast and the careful settings were responsible for the remarkably splendid way in which the play went over. Miss Emily Taft, leading lady, was especially to be commended for her splendid acting, and Robert Toms in the role of Paul Jones, leading man, was a wonder. The negro "mammy" took her part very well and did more than any other to lend "atmosphere"—unless it was the doctor!

"The Cat and the Canary" may have been responsible for a night of sleeplessness or bad dreams for many, and may have caused some unhappy frights on the way home, but it certainly gave to every member of the audience the most interesting entertainment they had witnessed in many a day.

SEN. WHITE MOSS ADDRESSES WOMEN ON STATE FINANCES

Urges Club to Adopt Program of Better Schools and Roads—Explains How Revenue Is Raised and Spent

MRS. HINKS TELLS OF PROGRESS IN CLEAN-UP DRIVE

One of the most interesting and instructive addresses heard here in a long time was one made yesterday afternoon by Senator White L. Moss of Pineville before the members of the Woman's Club. He spoke on state finances, how they were raised and how disbursed, and it was indeed unfortunate that more members were not present to hear the edifying facts which he presented.

"Is Kentucky getting a full dollar's worth of roads, of schools and other improvements for the money expended?" asked the senator. "It is the business of the Woman's Club and all citizens of the state to see that she does. It is a matter in which every one should be vitally interested and I think the Woman's Clubs should adopt a program of better schools and better roads to insure them for Kentucky."

Senator Moss began his speech with a thorough discussion of the tax question. He brought up the matter of the agitated coal tonnage tax and showed that, while southeastern Kentucky property was taxed from 60 to 80 per cent of its real value, the central Kentucky landowners, those who are most enthusiastically urging the coal tax, are assessed for only 5 to 25 per cent of their real worth. He read a number of statistics to prove this point.

Sources of Revenue

Last Year's revenue was $17,108,336.31 the senator said, obtained from a general forty cent tax rate, and special revenue on corporation licenses, county clerk remissions, inheritance tax, race track license, auto and gasoline tax, railroad and bank revenue, Federal road fund and city and county road bonds, as well as various other sources. This is disbursed to the schools, the roads and the state general fund.

Senator Moss emphasized the great increase in school and road funds in the past three years. Road appropriations, he said, had been increased 80 per cent, school funds 69 per cent, and teachers' salaries 110 per cent. He declared that he considered good roads the paramount consideration in building up Kentucky, and close on the heels of good roads, adequate school system. The senator spoke enthusiastically on this matter, however, and assured his audience that both of these issues were in sight.

Low Salaries State Officials

In connection with his discussion of disbursement of state funds, he took up the matter of state salaries, showing that the expense of running the state government was only 3.6 per cent, while any corporation considers itself economical if it keeps its overhead down to 5 per cent. "Kentucky is the stingiest state in the union with its state officials," he declared showing that no raise in salary had been made in the executive department of the state during the time that everything else had been doubled or tripled in value. Pursuing this idea, he told of the overworked conditions in many offices, especially the court of appeals, where the docket is two years behind time. A radical change in the state judiciary was recommended by the senator.

After Senator Moss finished speaking the club proceeded with its regular program. Two beautiful solos, 'Bells of the Sea," and "The Star," were sung by Will Hoe, accompanied by Miss Bertha Hoe. A letter from the Kiwanis Club endorsing the Woman's Club Clean-up program and offering the help and cooperation of that club in any way. The club particularly recommended cleaning up Cumberland avenue. Mrs. D. C. Hinks, president of the club, discussed progress in the clean-up, and told how the city had been districted for hauling garbage and trash, the city furnishing the wagons and sending prisoners along to shovel up the refuse. She spoke particularly of the help the club had received from various civic sources.

FOR A BETTER MIDDLESBORO

Specific improvements make up the details of a campaign for a BIGGER AND BETTER MIDDLESBORO, and a list is to be compiled of these details, for use from day to day. Today we are advocating:

That a general movement for street improvement be instituted immediately, with emphasis on repair and construction of Cumberland Avenue.

That a system of street marking be devised in this city so that a stranger or for that matter, a resident, can find his way around without undue inquiries.

That the spiritual side may not be neglected in the campaign for a Better Middlesboro, but rather that we should emphasize the importance of building spiritually as paramount to any material improvement.

That Middlesboro's lack of a fitting burial place be remedied and provisions for a cit ycemetery be made.

That every citizen of Middlesboro lend his wholehearted help in the Clean Up, Paint Up, Plant Up Campaign to be launched by the Woman's Club next week.

That steps be taken to provide for an adequate athletic field for Middlesboro.

A THOUGHT

FOR AN ADEQUATE BALL PARK

Middlesboro is denied the privilege of taking part in the great national sport, baseball, this season for the reason that it has no athletic field. There has been a great deal of interest manifested in the sport this year not only among the M. H. S. boys but by other players and fans and we could have hade an enjoyable season of the sport had there been an adequately equipped athletic field here.

The local school athletic director says that the East End Ball park would be an ideal one for baseball and other outdoor sports if it had a fence around it so that paid admission games could be held there. The fence which formerly surrounded the field has almost entirely disappeared and the problem of finding another source of fuel now confronts residents who have made ravages on the property.

The owner of the field, it is understood, would be quite willing for another fence to be built around it and a few hundred dollars, perhaps, would be sufficient to finance the job. While we are outlining our program for a better Middlesboro we cannot well afford to neglect the proposition of remodeling the public ball park. Money spent for this purpose would be an investment in healthful recreation for our boys as well a place for clean public entertainment.

It is perhaps too late in the season now to rebuild the fence for games this season but there will be football games next season and if we are to have any games here the work must be done before that time.

Athletics have taken a backward step in Middlesboro and its promoters are in despair over the prospects. Rebuilding of the ball park fence is all that can revive local interest in outdoor sports and any move which has for its purpose the remedy of present conditions will be commendable. Funds for the work could be raised by public subscription, by revenues from amateur entertainments or various other means.

The proposition is worthy of consideration and it is hoped that it will receive the attention of all those interested in the welfare of our boys. Astep in this derection will surely be one for a "Better Middlesboro."

OLD HOME TOWN

Twenty years ago Forest Butner found himself swamped with debts in his old home town, Lexington, Ky. "Some day I'll come back and pay you in full, with interest," he told his 14 creditors.

The years slipped by. In memories of the 14, Butner became vague phantom, seldom intruding on their attention.

The other night the 14 were invited to attend a banquet as guest of a mysterious stranger. The mysterious stranger, of course, was Butner—now a wealthy Oregon fruit grower. To each of his old creditors he handed an envelope containing a check in full for the old debts with compound interest to date.

"I am suppremely happy for the first time in years," Butner is quoted as saying when he took the train back west.

Any of us would be, returning in triumph to the old home town under similar circumstances.

At this time of year, your memory turns back to the community in which you spent your youth. You yearn to return.

If you go, you come back rather disappointed and disillusioned. You found the pump closer to the house, and all other distances similarly shortened, compared with the picture you carried in memory. Probably, as the train neared the old home town, a thrill went through you. You jumped off, looked eagerly about for familiar faces.

Alas, the faces were strange, except that the star pupil of your school days might be found driving a hack or loading milk cans and trunks and barrels and crates on the trains

Maybe you've had this experience. Most of us have Maybe too, you found only a few old-time friends when you combed the town; and even they had to be prompted before they could place you. Despite all this, each spring brings a desire to go back to the old associations of boyhood.

And life has few satisfactions greater than to return honorably and in triumph, like the Oregon fruit grower.

DEAR EDITOR:

(1) Going down town rather early one morning recently, I saw a number of merchants on the avenue sweeping doesn't know his last name. their places of business; sweep the dirt and trash across the side walks, and into the gutter. In front of each of these stores was already enough trash to fill a wheel barrow.

(2) I saw a housekeeper, living in a second-story flat, shake her rugs out a window, when the window of the flat, beneath, was wide open.

(3) I saw a second-story flat dweller scrape a plateful of table scraps out her window, that scattered on the back doorsteps of the grocery beneath.

(4) I saw a flat window open on a second floor, and several tin cans thrown out—some landing in a yard across the alley.

(5) I saw ashes heaped high in a number of back yards while in front of these dwellings were deep holes in the street. Would it not have been as easy to carry the ashes out front, and filled the holes, and at the same time have kept the yard neat and clean?

(6) Standing in front of the city school, at closing time, I saw a child or a teacher in each room step to the windows and close every one; thus preventing the impure air, from being blown out. The children, each morning, are met by the same vitiated air they left the evening before. Why were not the windows open wide till the janitor had swept?

Then we hear the town people ask: 'Why don't THEY keep the, town healthy and clean? Who are THEY? Only you and me. Is each of us doing our bit to keep Middlesboro sanitary, day by day, in every way?

AN INTIMATE STORY OF INNERMOST EMOTIONS REVEALED IN PRIVATE LETTERS

Copyright 1923 -NEA Service Inc

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO LESLIE PRESCOTT, CARE OF THE SECRET DRAWER

I am sitting here in my room at the hotel writing and, also, I am finding out that the first letter I am writing to be placed in that little secret drawer, where no one can see, is a letter which chronicles the greatest unhappiness of my life.

Jack has gone out and slammed the door with reverberations that were absolutely profane. We have been married less than a month and it has come to this. We have had a real quarrel and over such a little thing. I am quite sure I am not to blame, for surely husband and wife should have no secrets from each other.

I know that I would not care, in fact, I would be very glad, if Jack took enough interest in my friends—all of whom seem to bore him more or less—to read the letters from them to me. He could open them when and how he pleased and yet he said to me this morning that he considered anyone who would open another's letter capable of almost any underhanded thing. Of course, Jack must understand that I would not read one of his letters without telling him I had read it. If I did that I would feel I would merit his accusation.

When we went down to breakfast this morning Jack was busy at the news stand buying morning papers and cigarets. I walked over to the desk, for I was expecting a letter from home. Running through them hastily, I found two or three of them for me, but I was not much interested in them.

I saw one addressed to Jack which had Sydney Carton's bussiness address in the corner. Naturally I thought he was writing us in answer to my postal card and without the slightest hesitancy I tore it open. Before I could take the note from the envelope Jack came over to where I was standing.

"Any letters for me?" he asked.

"We have a letter from Sydney Carton," I answered.

"We," he spoke quickly in surprise. "Is it addressed to both of us?"

"No, it is addressed to you."

Jack reached over quickly, jerked the letter out of my hand and said in a rough tone of voice, "Leslie, I will read my own letters."

If he had struck me I could not have been more surprised and hurt. But he did not even stop to see how his cruelty had affected me.

Instead he walked rapidly toward the dining-room, evidently not caring whether I followed or not. I had all I could do to keep from turning and going back to our rooms. I felt the eyes of that supercilious hotel clerk boring into the back of my head. The satirical import of his smile brought the blood to my face.

I followed Jack into the dining-room, however.

My husband did not even rise from his seat at the table when I arrived there. He had a peculiar hard gray look on his face. I had never seen upon it before It made me feel as though I was looking into the face of a stranger. In a moment all our intimacy, all our communion of spirit seemed to have vanished. I almost felt that great primal difference which leads to the war of the sexes.

TOMORROW: Leslie continues this secret letter, telling of her husband's first neglect.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

OMINOUS WORDS

By Berton Braley

BERTON DAILY POEM .. ..

There's a prospect most alluring
In the thought of motor-touring
And of gypsying the highways far away from our abodes,
Till amid our contemplation,
We receive the information—
'Heaven help us, they've been working on the roads'!'

We can navigate the washes
Where the water whirls and sloshes,
We can chug through dismal marshes full of snakes and frogs and toads;
But we raise a doleful chorus
When this terror is before us,
Heaven help us they've been "working on the road."

For we know the perils lurking
Where the highway gangs are working,
How they dump the mud in mountains and the stone in mighty loads;
When no other vision daunts us,
Here's a fear that always haunts us—
Heaven help us, they've been working on the roads.

Puncture blowouts, engine trouble
Fret the owner of a bubble,
And he's always getting tangled in the local laws and codes;
But there's none of these that feazes
Like that awfullest of phrases,
Heaven help us, they've been "working on the roads."

HOME BUILDERS CALL FOR BRICK

24,000 Persons Write Brick Association in Three Months for Data on Building

CLEVELAND, April 24.—Indicating an increased tendency to build brick homes, 24,000 persons from all parts of the country have written to the Common Brick Manufacturing association since January 1, saying they are going to build homes and asking for the association's plan book showing brick houses, according to Ralph P. Stoddard, secretary-manager of the association

"This breaks all records," Mr. Stoddard said. "It shows that more people are interested in owning their homes this year than at any other previous time. Not every one who thinks of building writes us of course, but assuming, conservatively, that we receive an inquire from one person in a hundred that intends to build this would indicate that two million four hundred thousand new homes are now being talked of and considered in the United States"

Referring to brick construction, Mr Stoddard said that the United States Bureau of Standards recently made an announcement as to the strength of the "ideal wall" as compared with a solid brick wall The "ideal wall," he explained was developed from within the common brick industry to provide a lower cost of brick for constructing small buildings.

Although by the use of this wall the manufacturer will sell one-third less brick for each house built, it is believed that by reducing the cost of brick construction many more brick homes will be built

The wall is constructed by laying brick on edge instead of on their flat bed, making a hollow wall.

"The Bureau of Standards announces that when loaded eccentrically the eight-inche 'ideal wall" is about 24 per cent stronger than a solid brick wall of the same thickness," Mr Stoddard said "When the load is applied centrally, each type of wall has about the same strength."

EUSTER BROS. REMODELING ENTIRE FRONT OF STORE

The entire old front of the Euster Bros. Department store is being torn out and a new modern front made entirely of copper and glass will take its place. Instead of two entrances to the building there will be one wide entrance between the two large show windows.

The size of the store was increased a few weeks ago when the adjoining room occupied by the White Star confectionery was acquired and the partition taken out. New lighting fixtures have been installed recently affording the sales rooms the best possible light.

NEW VERRAN BUILDING TO BE FINISHED THIS WEEK

Remodeling of the building to be used by the Verran Department store is now in the last stages. H. E. Verran says that the work will be finished by the latter part of the week. New stocks have already arrived here and all will be in readiness for the opening of the store as soon as the repair work is completed and the fixtures which are expected to arrive here any time are installed

The building which joins that occupied by the Daily News has been thoroughly remodeled. A new floor has been laid, the walls have been newly papered in attractive patterns a new front and modern show windows have been made and mahogany colored shelves and places for the hanging of ladies' garments are being made. The interior of the place reflects an air of cleanliness and good taste that is conducive to good business and high class patronage.

BUILDING CODE REPORT GIVEN

Hoover's Committee Studies Building Problems Thoroughly In Investigation

One of the most notable things which has been undertaken in the realm of smaller building in general and home building in particular, is embodied in the report of the building code committee, working under Secretary Hoover and lately issued by the department of commerce. This report comprises the most thorough investigation that has ever been made of the engineering and practical construction details of home building. This committee is representative of the great voluntary organization, leading architects, engineers, and those eminent in the fields related to the building and housing industry. The existing building codes have been given a comprehensive study resulting in recommendations that eliminate wasteful and unjust requirements, and lack of consistency as between city and city. To illustrate, a brick wall or a concrete wall will carry the same load in New York that it will in any middle west or California city, yet it has been found that the building codes of these cities made different requirements.

The first part of the report deals with the building of one and two-family houses of brick concrete and frame construction, the latter including brick veneer and cement stucco. It would permit, for instance of an eight-inch solid brick wall, and six-inch solid concrete wall for two and a half and three-story dwellings, accommodating not more than two families each. Only about 40 per cent of the present building codes permit eight-inch walls for such dwellings. The built-in garage is given full discussion as to its requirements in relation to fire resistance.

The minimum requirements, as given in the report, are very concisely stated and, we feel, present a model ordinance for small house construction—one which we would be glad to see the cities adopt. The ordinance states merely the requirements, and is not encumbered with directions as to how the work shall be done or specifications of any kind. An appendix to the ordinance discusses good practice in small house construction and furnishes a useful guide to those who are interested in knowing how to save; in other words, how to spend for the best results. It contains many suggestions for better methods of building beyond that required annd which are available for those who are financially able to secure such advantages.

It is expected that the general adoption of this code will result in a large conservation of materials and labor, so that when applied to an aggregate running into an annual expenditure of billions of dollars for residence construction alone, will result in a very substantial sum being saved or rather conserved.—Keith's Maga-

"BETTY BLUE" PREDOMINATES IN TROUSSEAU OF DUKE OF YORK'S BRIDE

LADY BETTY, A NEGLIGEE AND AFTERNOON GOWN WHICH ARE PART OF HER TROUSSEAU AND THE PATTERN OF MACHINE-MADE LACE USED IN HER WEDDING GOWN.

LONDON, Apr. 24.—When Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon is married to the Duke of York on Thursday, she will wear a wedding dress of simple medieval design.

The design dates back to the fourteenth century and will be unusual because of its beauty and quaintness.

The material will be chiffon moire of an old ivory color embroidered with pearl beads, pearls and silver lame.

The gown will fall almost straight from the shoulders to the hem, following lines of the figure more or less closely above the waist but getting fuller toward the hem. The skirt will touch the toes.

Machine-Made Lace

The ivory tone has been chosen to match the lace, which has been made especially at Nottingham. Lady Elizabeth will be the first royal bride to wear machine-made lace It is a perfect reproduction of an old Malines pattern.

This lace will be used for the medieval sleeves, covering the arm as far as the elbow. The lower half of the arm is bare, but the lace falls in two long ends to the ground at the back.

For embroidery there are three bands of silve lame across the bodice and a central one that is continued down the front of the skirt.

This silver is partly covered both on the bodice and the skirt with a conventional design carried out in pearls pearl beads and fine silver thread, the hard lines of the lame being softened by tiny scrolls of silver thread each centered with a pearl on either side.

Old lace worn by the queen will form the train of the wedding gown. This will be mounted on chiffon.

A tulle veil mounted with a wreath of orange blossoms will complete the costume.

One romantic item of the trousseau is a strip of priceless old rose point Brussels lace which is to be inserted in the wedding dress.

It has been an heirloom in the Strathmore family for generations. An ancestress of the bride wore it at a great ball given for "Bonnie Prince Charlie" when he was staying at Holyrood palace in Scotland.

Bridesmaids' Dresses

In keeping with the loveliness of the bride's gown will be the dresses worn by her bridesmaids. They will be made of cream chiffon.

In the trimming the bride has defied all old superstitions about the unluckiness of green.

A silver and rose thistle will fasten the girdle of silver leaves from which a trail of spring green tulle at one side will trail to the ground.

The symbolism of the rose and thistle was the bride's own poetic idea. The white rose stands for York and the thistle is a reminder of her own Scotch descent.

The bridesmaids' dresses will be mounted on a foundation of crepe de chine hemmed with narrow overskirts of the chiffon, floating panels decorated with silver lame leaves. Long ends of chiffon will fall from pretty headdresses of silver leaves fastened over the ears with silver roses.

The going away dress of the bride will be dove gray crepe romain embroidered in dove and silver gray silk and with a complementary coatee of the same material. With this she will wear a small gray hat with massed gray flowers on the crown.

Blue and Gray

Blue and gray are the colors that predominate in the rest of the bride's trousseau. One is a suit of pale gray velvet with a loose jacket which fastens with a crystal buckle at the side. It also has a velvet waistcoat and a lace frill.

One of her afternoon gowns is a pearl gray macorcain frock. The full skirt is scalloped and edged with a narrow blue ruching.

There is a gray silk cloak to go with this and a toque of blue and gray flowers.

Another evening gown is of white georgette trimmed in her favorite blue—Betty blue—and with long wing draperies of georgette to take the place of sleeves.

One of her walking suits is of rich deep brown wool marocain with high Medici collar and wide sleeves all worked with wool stitchery and accompanied by a small hat of fine brown straw trimmed with ostrich feathers.

One little frock to be worn on afternoons or semi-evening occasions is of periwinkle blue crepe romain. The petal skirt is picot edged. Four tiny tucks at either side form the bodice decorations and the belt is a narrow plait of twisted crepe, self colored, which is tied at the back.

Lingerie is Simple

A great deal of the bride's lingerie has been made right in her own home under the supervision of her mother, Lady Strathmore.

Most of the negligee and tea gowns are of blue, particularly "atmosphere blue" "Robins egg blue". Some are of crepe marocain and others of crepe de chine.

While lace predominates, white swansdown is also a favorite garniture.

There are slippers and stockings to match all the gowns, but no boudoir caps, as the bride detests them.

The underwear is ivory white or pale shell pink. Ornate decoration has been avoided. A number of nightgowns and dressing-jackets are made of ivory white satin.

One nightgown made of white crepe de chine finished with Malines lace has been designed with a deep V neck line and long flowing sleeves.

had to go without ARCOLA because they waited till Fall

TO 5,000 families in 1921 came a real disappointment. There weren't enough ARCOLAS to fill their orders—and they shivered through the winter with stoves or an old-fashioned heating plant.

Three times as many homes are being built this year as in 1921.

And we can make only the same number of ARCOLAS as in 1921 because orders for larger Ideal Boilers have already over-taxed our factories.

The popularity of ARCOLA is tremendous. It is the only satisfactory heating plant for the small home. Gives you a genuine American Radiator in every room. Perfect protection for the children against colds and grippe. So economical that it pays for itself in the fuel it saves.

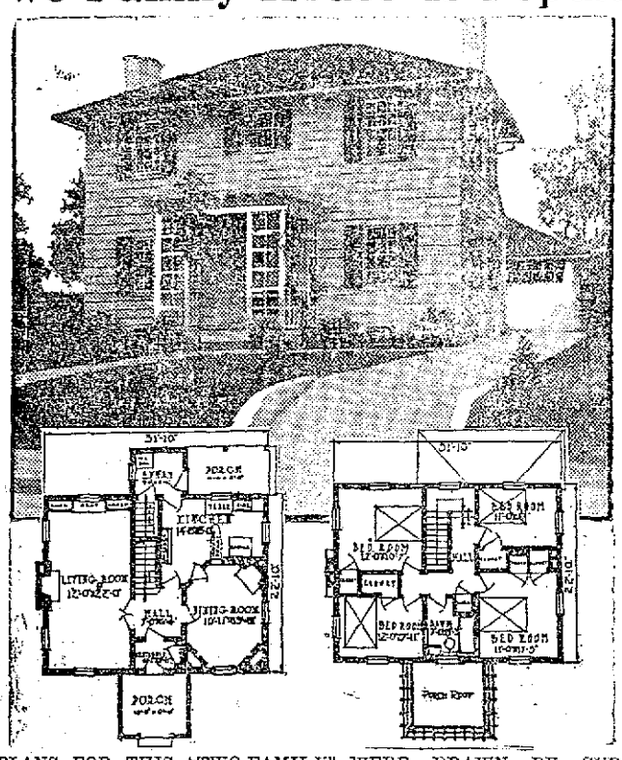
BUILDING

Two-Family House Is Popular



PLANS FOR THIS "TWO-FAMILY" WERE DRAWN BY CURTIS SERVICE BUREAU, CLINTON, IA. FIRST FLOOR PLAN AT RIGHT; SECOND FLOOR, LEFT.

Two-family houses are enjoying a rapid rise in popularity, one reason being that it is a "home that buys itself," for the rent from one apartment will produce income to repay the investment, at the same time that the owner is enjoying his own home in the other apartment.

There are two different types of such houses: The two-family house, in which similar apartments are located side b side, and the duplex, where the appartments are up and dawn.

Separate Entrances

Such a house may be just as attractive from the exterior as a single residence; but in general, more care has to be taken in the choice of a plan to insure this. Mose people prefer a style having the general appearance of a single large house, yet which has separate entrances and porches.

The two-family type, pictured here, is a spendid example of Colonial architecture. Wide siding, green blinds, twelve-light windows, Colonial entrances and narrow cornices, carry out the refinement and simplicity characteristic of the best Colonial models.

The apartments on each side of the house are identical, but reversed. Each entrance admits to a main stair hall, which is also directly accessible from the kitchen. French doors are used between the hall and living room and between living room and dining room.

Basement Divided

Upstairs in each apartment there are two bedrooms and a slightly smaller linen case and medicine cabinet, or sewing room, with bathroom, built-There is a stair to the attic, which may be used by both tenants. The basement is divided into two, and each family has its own basement steps off the kitchen and under the main stairs. Separate heating plants and laundry rooms are provided.

Built-in features makes the interior attractive and convenient. There is a pair of corner china closets in the dining room kitchen dresser and worktable, linen case and medicine cabinet.

The overall dimensions of this house are 45 feet by 28 feet, so that only a fair-sized lotis required. Yet each apartment contains all the necessities and many of the luxuries of a modern five-room house.

COUNCIL REFUSES PERMIT TO BUILD ON AVENUE OFFSET

Permit to erect a building for business purposes on the offset at the corner of East Cumberland avneue and Tenth street was requested by the Haley Bros., at the city council meeting last night. The permit was refused because the land forming the offset is the property of the city.

It was explained by the mayor that the granting of the permit to build there might lead to diffieulties later on should the city ever desire to have the building removed. It was hinted however, that the building could be erected without the consent of the city as others have been. The city could then proceed to have the building removed at anytime.

Offsets similar to those at the corner of Twentieth street and Cumberland avenue occur at regular ten-block intervals. This is perhaps the first time that the legal status of such properties has come before the council.

Building Notes

Pete Calegi is beginning the erection of a residence house on Exeter avenue between Twenty-first and Twenty-second street.

Lloyd Jones has just completed a four room house at Binghamtown.

A number of residence houses are being built at the Junction. Among those who are now constructing houses are C. E. Harris, H. A. Kawood and Dewey Dillman. The house being built by Mr. Harris is a handsome six room bungalow. The other two are smaller houses.

Judge L. K. Rice is repairing his house on Englewood Road.

Harry Moss is painting his house on Englewood Road.

Local lumber companies report that many small frame garages are now being built by people of Middlesboro and vicinity.

Permit has been granted Sam Weinstein for the building of a bungalow on Exeter avenue between Twenty-first and Twenty-second street.

G. E. Byrge is beginning the erection of a four room house near the Junction.

P. K. Mynatt of Knoxville was visiting here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs Robert Low of Pineville were here last night to attend the show at the Manring.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Silvers, Mrs. Charles Collier and Bob Ralston attended "The Cat and the Canary" from Fork Ridge.
